1. Gramatika

Ići, idem (to go)

IĆI (to go)
idem	idemo
ideš	idete
ide	idu

2. Gramatika

The verb ići, idem and the prepositions u and na.

When using the verb to go (ići, idem), the destination needs to be expressed in the accusative case.

Idemo u školu. We're going to school.

Idemo na posao. We're going to work.

As shown in the examples above, Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian uses two words to express where someone is going, and the choice of the correct word (u or na) depends on the destination. If the destination is a physical location (a cinema, a school), use u. If the destination is abstract, such as an event (a concert, a coffee date, a sports game) or a location without clearly defined physical boundaries (the seaside, a stadium, a lake, a mountain), use na.

In the examples below, note how the selection of the noun — cinema or film, cafe or coffee — shifts the emphasis from the location itself (u nouns) to the activity that takes place there (na nouns).

Idemo u kino/bioskop.

We're going to the cinema.

We're going to (see) a movie.

Idemo u kafić.

We're going to a cafe.

Idemo na kafu.

We're going to (have) a coffee.

However, before this distinction becomes intuitive, it is useful to memorize new location and event words as either “u” words or “na” words. The table shows an overview of the rules with some common examples.

Ići u...	Buildings, venues, enclosed spaces: restoran, kino/bioskop, škola, park, biblioteka/knjižnica, pozorište/kazalište Cities, towns, countries: grad, Njujork, Srbija, Amerika, Bosna...	Idemo u restoran. Selma ide u Srbiju.
Ići na...	Unenclosed spaces or flat surfaces: plaža, ostrvo/otok, kej Activities and events: Ručak, piće, kafa/kava, koncert, film, čas/sat, posao, utakmica, sastanak Abstract destinations, institutions: fakultet, univerzitet/sveučilište, more	Ana i Stefan idu na ručak, a Selma ide na ples. Selma ide na fakultet.

Bitno!

Ići kući (to go home)

The phrase "to go home" is an exception to the general rule of using the accusative case with "ići." You have to remember it as a frozen expression: ići, idem + kući.

For example:

Oni idu kući = They are going home.

The accusative case of adjectives

The table below shows the accusative forms of adjectives for masculine and feminine nouns. Accusative forms of neuter nouns and adjectives are the same as in the nominative.

NOMINATIVE (m.)	ACCUSATIVE
	Muški rod		Ženski rod
	animate -og (w/o hat), -eg (w. hat)	inanimate -Ø	-u
tužan, tužna; loš, loša; dobar, dobra; dosadan, dosadna	tužn- og profesora loš- eg profesora dobr- og profesora dosadn- og profesora	tužan film loš film dobar sto dosadni sto	tužn- u ženu loš- u ženu dobr- u ženu dosadn- u ženu
taj, ta ovaj, ova onaj, ona	tog profesora ovog profesora onog profesora	taj sto ovaj sto onaj sto	tu ženu ovu ženu onu ženu

If “fleeting a” occurs when the adjective changes genders in the nominative, it will also occur in other cases, before adding the appropriate ending.

The distribution of endings for masculine animate adjectives, -og and -eg, as well as neuter adjective endings -o and -e, abide by the “hat rule”: ending that start with -o follow hard consonants (without hats), and -eg follows soft consonants (with hats).

4. Gramatika

Voiced and voiceless consonants

Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian has seven voiceless consonants: K, S, Š, T, P, Č, Ć.

Consonants that are “voiceless” are those that are pronounced without vibrating the vocal cords. Each voiceless consonant in Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian is paired with a corresponding voiced consonant: G, Z, Ž, D, B, DŽ, Đ. All the remaining consonants are voiced and do not have pairs.

To understand the difference between voiceless and voiced consonants, place your hand on your throat, and read the voiced consonants followed by their voiceless pairs. You will notice that the position of your mouth and tongue stays the same for both of them – this is why they are paired with one another – but when you’re pronouncing the voiced ones, you will feel your throat vibrate.

VOICED	VOICELESS
G	K
Z	S
Ž	Š
D	T
B	P
DŽ	Č
Đ	Ć

Once you feel like you can tell the difference between the two consonant types, try pronouncing a voiced and a voiceless consonant in quick succession: you will probably notice that it’s somewhat tricky or unnatural.

However, sometimes two consonants that are not adjacent in the basic form become adjacent as the word changes to gender, case, or tense. Sometimes, this results in a cluster of two consonants that have the same value. For example, the masculine form of the adjective ružan (ugly) has a fleeting a when it changes into the feminine gender, resulting in a consonant cluster of “žn.”

m. ružan → f. ružna

Both ž and n are voiced consonants, and therefore no intervention is needed.

In other adjectives, this is not the case. For example, in sladak (sweet), the fleeting a puts together a voiced d and a voiceless k. Since d has a voiceless pair, it is possible to make the adjective slad-ka easier to pronounce: the voiced d loses its voicedness by turning into its pair, t. This generates the feminine gender of the adjective: slatka. Other common examples include težak (heavy, difficult) and nizak (short, in height).

m.		×	f.
sladak	→	slad-ka	→ slatka
težak	→	tež-ka	→ teška
nizak	→	niz-ka	→ niska

The same change happens across all cases, whenever the fleeting a leads to two differently voiced consonants standing next to one another.

Possessive pronouns in the accusative

Possessive pronouns have the same accusative endings as adjectives. Try filling in the rest of the table based on the pattern you already know.

The accusative forms of possessive pronouns are constructed just like the accusative forms of adjectives. Consult the table in Gramatika 3 to deduce the accusative form of possessive pronouns and complete the table below.

6. Gramatika

Compound sentences across three standards

There are two ways to build a compound sentence (a sentence with multiple verbs) in Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian. The first, which does not use the word da, may be used in all three standards. The first verb matches the subject of the sentence in gender and number, and takes on the appropriate tense (we only know the present so far); the second verb has to be in the infinitive.

The conjugated verb + infinitive structure is used across all standards. Serbian will frequently use the verb + da + verb variant, and Bosnian speakers will sometimes opt for that structure as well. Croatian, however, does not allow for the conjugated verb + da structure.
